

Media consolidation limits our sources of information and entertainment, and gives way to slanted opinions and biased broadcasting. Sinclair is currently undertaking a huge example of this abuse of public airwaves. To the best of my knowledge it is the medias duty by law to serve the public interest, and it seems that Sinclair is serving no interests but their own by forcing its companies to air a smear campaign against John Kerry. It would be a great travesty to allow a single company to buy our democratic rights. I hope the FCC seriously considers how unfair and damaging allowing a onesided political opinion to air on national television would be. The Sinclair group's actions show exactly why media ownership laws need to be continually strengthened, not destroyed. Thank you very much.
